

To think that they called you crazy. They simply didn't recognize your genius. Oh, they knew you were smart and clever, that is why you were on the team. They couldn't recognize genius though because so much of what you see is beyond them. They thought that Project Resonance was something as simple as a non-lethal weapon to stop civil unrest or terrorists. You've always seen that it was much more: a gateway to an entirely new way of life.

You were a bastard child of a prominent man who never wanted his indiscretions to come to light. First he paid off your mother to keep her silence when he was merely a state legislator. Then he paid for your way through college, and then a doctoral degree in neuroscience when he was a Senator. Finally, you put the screws to him yourself in order to get funding for your research after he got into the cabinet. Like a little marionette, he made everything possible. He even got you into Project Resonance once you found out about it. Once things had progressed far enough with the Project, it was up to you to help let this cat out of the bag, in order to see what it would do in the great big laboratory that is life.

Come out it did, and the new world is here now. Old minds and old ways of thinking have been wiped clean away. New things stir in the world, you're certain of that. And oh, how you'll enjoy studying them and finding entirely new ways of experimenting with this greatest playground of all.

Dr. Solan is another scientist who didn't fit into academia. You personally have always had almost as hard a time dealing with the military and all there rules as with academia, but Resonance is a place you can actually work, and Dr. Solan is part of what makes it that way.

Dr. Yu has great ideas, but doesn't understand the true value of this work. Dr. Yu is too focused on one child to see the greatness that this project could be.

Dr. Raines thinks that sceince can be run like a factory. A mind like that can never understand true greatness.

Dr. Hefetz is the military's "scientist in charge". If Dr. Raines thinks science is a factory, Dr. Hefetz almost wants to run it like a club. Hefetz thinks that just because someone was a friend in the military they should be on this project. That's the only reason Dr. Roma made it into something as important as this.

Dr. Pollan doesn't understand the greatness of what you are doing here. If it was up to people like Pollan nothing would ever move on to testing. That's why you have to ignore people like that.

Zuckerman should have been your assistang. How could it be the Dr. Solan spotted someone like that first. Perhaps you can steal Zuckerman away. A brilliant mind trapped in lowly work. You understand that suffering.

General Rosen is nothing but a glorified thug. No one like that should be in charge of scientific research.

Manager Edwards is the business manager of the project, and is more concerned with making a buck and putting a pretty face on in front of the public than in making true scientific achievement.

Vice President Richardson is your father's legitimate child, who has had every advantage you never had and has risen to the heights of power and prestige because of it. The VP has always been distasteful and ashamed of you.
